

Funding Your Studies

It's entirely up to you whether you pay in full or spread the cost of your studies. We can offer you a range of easy payment options including pay as you go and pay monthly to make gaining a university qualification more affordable. The two main ways of funding your studies are instalment plans or employer sponsorship:

1. Instalment plans

We give students the complete price for their course and then we break this down to suit their payment needs. Instalments are available for many programmes but amounts and frequency can vary depending on the awarding university, course or institution. Many programmes allow payment on a per module basis, meaning that you can pay as you go, whilst others offer bi-monthly payments or even yearly payments. To reduce any inconvenience we accept all major debit/credit cards. For a full list of course fees, please login and visit our fees page here. We're here to help you so please contact a Programme Advisor today on 0800 268 7737 or +44 (0) 24 765 15700 and we'll answer all your questions straight away.

2. Employer sponsorship

Many companies are willing to fully or partly sponsor their employees, so remember to talk to your training manager or human resources director. Many of our students find that their employers are impressed with the self discipline and commitment shown by an employee who completes a distance learning programme in order to further their career. We are happy to answer any questions your employer may have and even talk to your employer direct. Money Back Guarantee*

Our promise to you. If you're still unsure about taking that next step, then consider this. If during the first 30 days of your studies you are not completely satisfied you can claim a full refund of your fee*. So what do you have to lose by applying?

Comparing the cost of studying

All the distance learning qualifications we offer have exactly the same status as those studied on a university campus so we can make a direct cost comparison. A recent NatWest Student Money Matters survey revealed that sixth formers starting university expect to pay £33,512 for a three-year degree course. As a result, they expect to graduate with £14,779 of debt.

By studying a university degree by distance learning you could save at least £42,791 over the same timescale. You could also be three years further ahead in your career than a full-time university student. So choosing to study a university distance learning qualification with can save you money and progress your career.
