

Caribbean students vote for distance learning

November 21, 2008

Caribbean students vote for distance learning.

October brought an influx of nearly 200 Caribbean students to a range of RDI programmes. Regional Director, Andrew Cawley believes the allure of RDI's iLearn is one significant reason for this surge:

"Students certainly seem to be interested in our new online university. The chance to network 24/7 with fellow students around the world seems to have captured everyone's interest."

"RDI has enhanced its traditional portfolio"

The Wales online programmes including their MBA and Master's Entry Diploma in Management have proved extremely popular with well over 100 Caribbean students enrolling on these programmes since July. Potential students are also responding well to the wider portfolio on offer as RDI has recently enhanced its traditional portfolio of business management programmes by adding degrees in education, law, psychology and hospitality.

"RDI is going from strength to strength"

The LLB offered in partnership with the the University of Teesside is proving popular with many candidates excited about the career opportunities in Law that this programme can present. RDI is going from strength to strength in the American region even (as reported yesterday) recently launching a Spanish language MBA aimed at the Hispanic market in Latin America.
